IT stocks brace for more pain after muted Q1

Macro uncertainty, US tariffs make outlook cautious

SAI ARAVINDH
Mumbai, 29 July

Investors in India's information technology (IT) companies are likely in for more pain ahead as muted earnings for the first quarter of 2025-26 (Q1FY26) play spoilsport at the bourses in the worst-performing sector this year amid macro uncertainties. Investors, analysts suggest, can look for better opportunities in the markets as things stand.

The Nifty IT index is set for three straight quarters of under-performance against the benchmark Nifty50, and has fallen by 18.4 per cent so far this year, the worst among key sectors. Year-to-date (YTD), all 10 constituents of the index have declined, led by Oracle Financial Services, with a fall of 32 per cent, followed by Tata Consultancy Services (25.5 per cent), and HCLTech (23.5 per cent). During the same period, Nifty has risen by 4.8 per cent.

US President Donald Trump's flip-flops on the tariff front, and tax policies have triggered growing concerns in America, making the outlook for IT stocks more cautious. Companies flagged continued macro uncertainty and global disruptions from conflicts and supply issues while announcing their Q1FY26 numbers.

Sandip Agarwal, fund manager at Sowilo Investment Managers, said that though the Q1 results of IT companies were broadly in line with expectations, revenue growth disappointed in some cases, like TCS, while Infosys delivered a slightly positive surprise. "The challenge is that even on margins, it's a mixed bag," Agarwal said.

He further said that the "massive weakness" in demand is a structural issue that is likely to persist going ahead, along with continued challenges in volume growth. Agarwal warned that the second half of the financial year will face pressure on both revenue

Weak showing

As on July 29	Share price (₹)	YTD change (%)
Oracle Financial Services	8,664.5	-32.3
Tata Consultancy Services	3,056.0	-24.2
HCLTech	1,472.4	-23.0
Persistent Systems	5,176.5	-19.8
Infosys	1,513.7	-19.5
Wipro	251.8	-16.6
Tech Mahindra	1,453.8	-14.8
Coforge	1,720.5	-11.0
LTIMindtree	5,056.5	-9.5
Mphasis	2,774.3	-2.6
Nifty IT	35,373.3	-18.4
Nifty 50	24,821.1	5.0

and margins. "We are in for a tough time," he averred. Agarwal sees more pain in the upcoming quarter, with September likely to bring a little relief, given that growth in India is primarily first-half-driven. In the second half of the year, December typically sees holiday-related breaks, with many manufacturing units going on furlough.

The only opportunity for growth is in the first half, and the first quarter has already been poor, he said. "Even if the second quarter is slightly better, I don't think it can make up for what we've lost," Agarwal added.

The IT sector is in a wait-and-watch mode, with stocks likely to move sideways. Fundamentally, this sector doesn't deserve to be where it is, Agarwal said. Various brokerages, including JM Financial and PL Capital, are underweight on the IT Services pack. Analysts at PL Capital noted that they remain underweight as the current phase of global uncertainty will result in slow orders from clients.

"IT remains the lowest-performing major sector so far this year. There are no strong near-term triggers that would lead to a major outperformance from here. The Trump-era tariffs continue to have an effect, and this impact is likely to persist until there is more clarity on the matter," said Sanjeev Hota, vice president-head of research at Mirae Assets Sharekhan.

CHOOSING ALGO STRATEGY FOR RETAIL INVESTORS

Prioritise back-tested data over popularity

HIMALI PATEL

cofounder, coinhunt.bot.

The Securities and Exchange Board of India's (Sebi's) new norms for retail participation in algorithmic (algo) trading will take effect from October 1. Investors looking to adopt this automated approach must first assess its pros, cons, and risks.

Mixed views

Reactions to the new norms are divided. Some believe they will improve transparency and security. "These norms promote accountability and reduce risk for retail investors," says Rajesh Ganesh, founder and chief executive officer, TripleInt Trading Systems.

Others fear they could result in higher entry barriers.

"The static IP requirement (a stable internet address) is impractical, especially for traders who use basic setups or travel. Compliance with these norms will require additional infrastructure like cloud servers, which will raise costs," says Ramakrishnan Selvaraj,

Understanding algos

Algo trading involves using pre-programmed computer algos to place and execute trades automatically. "Algos provide speed and they can handle a high volume of trades. Automation removes emotion from decision-making. Trades only get executed when certain preset conditions are met, which reinforces discipline," says Ganesh.

Investors need to understand the difference between white- and black-box algos. "In white-box algos, the logic behind trade decisions is visible to users. In black-box algos, the reason why a buy or sell signal was generated is not disclosed," says Ganesh. White-box models are more transparent. But most providers offer black-box versions to protect their proprietary strategies. Sebi's norms permit only registered research analysts to offer black-box algos.

Avoid algo with high drawdown
Ganesh suggests reviewing back-tested performance across varied market conditions to assess a strategy's robustness. He adds that drawdowns should ideally not exceed 20–30 per cent. Investors should also check risk-adjusted return ratios like Sharpe and Sortino. Trading frequency also matters. "More trades can lead to higher costs and hence lower net returns," says Ganesh.

Warning signs

Investors must seek at least one year of back-tested data. "Short-term, cherry-picked data may hide significant losses," says Selvaraj.

Algo providers must disclose net returns after factoring in taxes and transaction costs, and must incorporate a realistic trade failure rate in the results they show. "Before selecting an algo, confirm that orders are actually being placed on an exchange through it. This will help you avoid fraudulent algos," says Vikas Singhania, chief executive officer, TradeSmart.

Tips to control risk

- Define maximum exposure per trade and total capital allocated to the algo
- Use a kill switch to halt trades instantly if required
- Implement throttling to restrict order volume
- Set stop-losses and circuit breakers at both individual trade and portfolio levels
- Define a daily loss cap to trigger automatic shutdown after a certain amount of loss

Mistakes to avoid

First-time investors invest small amounts without understanding the strategy. When they lose that money, they invest more to try and recover the original amount. "Begin with a small investment, observe performance, then scale up gradually," says Selvaraj.

Singhania warns that over-leveraging can result in massive losses. Many investors do not check back-tested data and rely purely on an algo's popularity. "This tendency to follow the herd without doing due diligence often leads to losses," says Selvaraj. Not monitoring an algo is another common mistake. "Even automated systems require human supervision. Sometimes, technical issues can arise that may require manual intervention," says Singhania.

Selvaraj advises using brokers with reliable application programming interfaces (APIs).

Algo trading suits those who favour disciplined, rule-based decisions. "Users need to have a fundamental understanding of how logical conditions work," says Trivesh D, chief operating officer, Tradejini. He adds that algo trading is capital-intensive, hence investors must have a minimum ₹10 lakh, plus some buffer.

He suggests that those who prefer a hands-off approach, get anxious in volatile markets, or are overwhelmed by things like setting up the system, back-testing, and trade analysis should avoid algo trading.

Fat paycheck, fatter EMI? Some home-loan mistakes to avoid

A high income doesn't guarantee peace of mind, especially when your home loan takes the front seat. A Reddit user recently shared how he felt financially constrained after taking a ₹1.2 crore home loan, despite earning ₹2.2 lakh a month. After paying ₹75,000 as EMI, the user struggled with managing family expenses.

Many high earners overcom-mit to large home loans and end up "asset-rich, cash-poor." Experts suggest a few steps.

Trusting loan approvals as a green signal

"Lenders don't factor your family obligations, insurance gaps, or investment goals. Responsibility lies with the borrower to self-assess," says Vineet Agrawal, cofounder of bond investment platform Jiraaf.

No pre-loan emergency or insurance planning

Many first-time borrowers skip creating a buffer. "If you're committing ₹75,000 every month, you need an emergency fund of at least 6-12 months of expenses," says Ranjit Jha, chief executive officer of Rurash Financials.

Checklist

- Keep EMI share under 30-35 per cent of your monthly take-home
- Continue investing monthly
- Buy term insurance equal to loan amount
- Carry comprehensive health insurance
- Use realistic income estimates
